TRANSLATION

Read the text and translate into Spanish from the following paragraph: “In China my father was a bank manager” to “... something useful like that.” (Up to 4 points)

In his new situation in Canada, and with the language problems, my father is not really in the right place. He cannot find a good job, appropriate for him. He works with machines all the time. The pay is not very good, but he is happy because the boss is friendly. He can take an hour for lunch. In China, he went to a restaurant with his friends. Here, he reads a lot in his lunchtime. But he cannot read English yet.

[In China, my father was a bank manager. He had an easy life. Here, he works in a company, and he works very hard. He goes to school in the evening, so that he can study English. After a whole day's work, how he can find enough energy to listen to the teacher? I don't know.

I ask my father: what do you expect from us in the future? He answers with a smile. He says it is enough if we can find good husbands and have good families. I don't think so. I know he wants us to be famous, to be doctors, or something useful like that.]

TRANSLATION

Read the text and translate into Spanish from the following paragraph: “In China my father was a bank manager” to “... something useful like that.” (Up to 4 points)

I want to tell you about Bob Heinemann. He works at the New York Stock Exchange; he always dresses in a grey suit, and he always worries about money. [He admits that he has a lot of good things in his life: he married a nice woman named Lois; they have a nice little daughter; they live in a nice little suburb. But he is worried because he is not as secure financially as his parents were. His greatest fear is of never having enough. He always wants more. As he tells me about that, I realize that Bob is always going to worry, because the fear of never having enough is one of the strongest anxieties.]

Money, of course, says a lot about us, and about our place in society. We always want higher salaries. With a high salary, we think, we are better people, more valuable to society. We can say that money isn't important to us, but our attitude towards money tells us a lot about ourselves and our own society. And in our society, we are what we earn.
